Women Ages 40-60 Pay More for Auto Insurance

Contrary to the popular belief that men pay more for auto insurance than women, several studies in 2018 and 2017 showed that women, especially between the ages of 40 and 60, often pay more for auto insurance than their male counterparts. California recently became the latest state to outlaw setting auto insurance rates based on gender.

Attitude Has Shifted on What Car to Buy a Young Driver

In the past, parents buying a car for their young driver would look for the oldest, cheapest, often largest car possible. But that's not true anymore, says the director of transportation safety at the National Safety Council. Now, advanced safety features provide "extra eyes and ears" for rookie drivers, and parents are looking to "buy as much safety" as they can afford.
