RISING CAR PRICES

Slow and steady inflation is a normal part of life. But what happens when it gets to record-high levels faster than most can keep up? As you've probably noticed, the used and new car market is experiencing this increase right now. Analysts predict that it may be a while before prices come down or level off, but that doesn't mean you can't find a car you'll love. Keep these things in mind when shopping around:

- Be flexible: Consider your financing options if leasing isn't enticing. Look for model options or packages you may not be familiar with.
- New may be cheaper: As the graphic shows, the used car market price may be higher.
- Be patient: If you do find a new car, you may have to wait weeks or even months for it to arrive.

- If you're finishing a lease, consider selling it: You may be in a situation where the car is worth more than the buyout price of the lease. If that's the case, you may be able to rack up some extra cash for your next car.
- Choose Estrella: Get quality coverage and the most savings on car insurance.

Nobody really knows when things will go back to "normal," but experts agree that used car prices will come back down before new car prices go down. Experts also agree that you'll always get the LOWEST price guaranteed with us.

Higher gas prices too!? We feel your pain. Because we're all about saving you the most money we can, we thought you'd want to get the inside scoop on ways you can still pay less.

1. Choose your gas station wisely. It can make a big difference in how much you're spending to fuel your vehicle. Stations near an airport or closer to the highway may charge higher prices.
2. Use a gas station app or website. GasBuddy or GetUpside are free options that help you sort the best choices by distance and price.
3. Cash, credit or debit? Think about the best way to pay, as some places offer more incentives, like 10 to 15 cents off per gallon, if you pay with cash.

Plus, remember that good driving habits and keeping your tire pressure in check make a difference. With our low insurance rates and these handy tips, your pocket will thank you in the long run.

If your clothes, appliances, electronics, furniture and other items are damaged, stolen or destroyed during a covered event like a break-in or severe storm, this coverage may pay to repair or replace them. They are typically part of a standard homeowners insurance policy.

Generally, personal property coverage is set at a percentage of your home's "dwelling" coverage limit. However, this is an area you may be able to lower if you know you have fewer valuable belongings and want to reduce your insurance costs.

If you have more expensive items such as jewelry, art and collectibles, our agents can guide you and help you find a policy that meets your needs and, best of all, is right within your budget.
